Design

Sirius is the brightest star in the night sky. It is also the new architectural sign system designed by Holscher Design, one of Scandinavia's most recognised and award-winning design agencies, for Modulex.

The Sirius range was created with structural design, creativity and quality in its core, encapsulating the same values that Modulex proudly maintains for all of its products.

The principle idea behind the new modular design was to create an aesthetic and transparent sign system. It needed to be elegant without sacrificing its versatility or integral design. It had to be a system that would complement and enhance not disrupt the environmental architecture. By using glass panels and brushed stainless steel, the Sirius range successfully marries design and sustainability.

Features

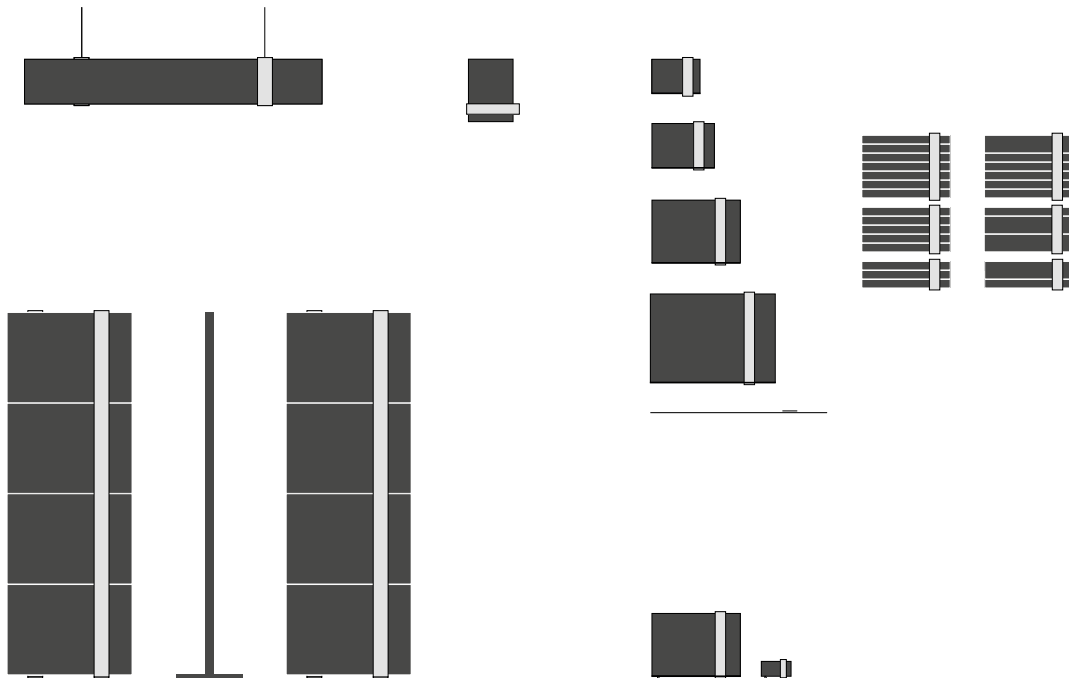

Sirius signs can be produced with one or two pieces of 4 mm glass. The signs can be layered utilising different surfaces for text and graphic applications and used with foil or paper inserts. By combining various surfaces, even a 3D effect can be created.

The Paperflex signs have been built with an innovative hinge and locking system, allowing the user to change the insert with ease and to maximise versatility.

The Sirius sign family is modular and adaptable, allowing the use of combined panel materials, including glass. By employing various material and graphic options, the possibilities for creative and purposeful signage with Sirius are infinite.

Range

Sirius is a complete interior sign system which includes door and wall signs (Permanent or Paperflex), suspended, projected, desk and table signage. Completing the range, a freestanding monolith is also included in the system.
